MOTHER'S DAY:

11-Year-Old Vallejoan Seeking Marrow Donors

Publisher's Note: Mother's Day means something special in our community. It always has. Beyond the candy, the flowers and the cards, African-Americans know full well the value of Mom. We at the North Bay Progress salute all the mothers who have brought us over life's bridges, even while dealing with their own tribulations. We especially want to salute one young mom, Lavonia Wade, whose 11-year-old son, Mishawn Robinson was recently diagnosed with aplastic anemia.

Since he was diagnosed in mid-March, life has not been the same for Mishawn, his mother, his grandparents and other family members.

The only long-term cure for Mishawn, who is Lavonia Wade's only child, is a bone marrow transplant. To that end, Union Baptist Church and the Judy Davis Foundation is pulling together to mount a drive to find the right bone marrow match for Mishawn.

When Lavonia Wade first heard her son Mishawn complain about feeling tired, she chalked it up to his constant activity. What else could it be? Mishawn, she reasoned, had a typically hectic and fun-filled schedule like most youngsters his age. Yet, at the end of the day, the Hilltop Christian School sixth grader would tell his mother that he felt tired. One day after she and her son walked a short distance, she noticed he was exhausted. She couldn't ignore his complaints any longer. She knew something was wrong with her child.

Lavonia Ward and her son Mishawn Robinson who was two-years-old when this picture was taken. Mishawn is now 11-years-old.

"It was so hard to believe," Lavonia Wade said, reflecting on that day nearly two months ago when she first heard the doctor's diagnosis. How could you believe something like that when your child looks so healthy...it's still hard for me to believe," she said, her soft voice starting to crack as she spoke of her son.

Doctors told his mother that the long term cure for Mishawn would come in the form of a bone marrow transplant, a procedure by which healthy bone marrow from another person is used to replace Mishawn's bone marrow. The problem, however, is that it requires a perfect match.

Since his diagnosis, Mishawn's famil has been in touch with the Judy Davis Marrow Donor Recruitment Program, a non-profit volunteer-based organization that works through churches, private corporations, the public and private sector to educate African-

If The Recent Police Acquittal Was The Ultimate "Wake-Up Call," Did We Hear It?

When that Simi Valley jury acquitted four Los Angeles police officers of the videotaped beating of Rodney King, what they essentially told us to do was recheck our vision. What we thought we saw was just not true.

Despite the videotape that showed more than 20 officers beat King to the ground, the jury chose to acquit. What we really saw, they told us, was well-trained police officers carrying out their duty.

The recent events, however, prove that while the 12 jurors saw one thing, millions of people saw something entirely different.

While a great deal of the uprisings that have occurred following the recent verdict were unnecessary — stealing, and random beating of innocent people is wrong — the anger and frustration that many people felt upon hearing the acquittals was completely understandable.

Like most of you, I was appalled by the decision. Instead of April 27, 1992, I thought back to 1965 when Watts went up in flames — again following an incident of police brutality. What grew out of that incident was the Kerner Commission Report, which basically said that America was divided into two separate and distinct groups — one white and one black. What recent events tell us is that since that Kerner report, some of the same problems that sparked the Watts riot, are still there, just below the surface — always ready to erupt.

Unlike 1965, however, there are added troubles that have been dumped into the cauldron. Along with the long-standing ingredients of discrimination and poverty, are the drugs that have ravaged our cities and towns. Near hysterical coverage of the drugs and gangs that have sprouted up throughout Americans, as well as other communities, about marrow transfusions. According to the foundation, there are insufficient numbers of minority marrow donors listed in the national registry to give African-Americans and other minority blood diseased patients a chance to find an unrelated donor.

The Rev. Kemp Burley, pastor of Union Baptist Church, said he is in contact with the Davis Foundation and they have tentatively scheduled a day in mid-May for donors to be tested at the North Vallejo church. Mishawn's grandmother, Orean Grayson-Wade is an member of the church, which is located at 123 Nugent Drive.

Not only will Mother's Day have special meaning for Lavonia Wade this year, she said that each day she spends with her child has special significance.

"This experience has taught me so much—that children are precious gifts from God."

What Are The Legal Requirements of Executing a Valid DPAHC?

In last month's column I discussed the merits of executing a Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care. The Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care (DPAHC) is a legal document whewreby a person, known as the "principal," can appoint an agent to make health care decisions on the principal's behalf. This appointment gives the agent the legal authority to make health care decisions on the principal's behalf. In general, a DPAHC makes it unnecessary for a friend or relative to undergo the often expensive and time-consuming process of obtaining a court order.

So now that it has been determined that it is a good idea for many seniors in particular have a DPAHC—what are the legal requirements of executing a valid DPAHC?

First, the principal must have mental competency at the time he or she signs the document. This means that the principal is mentally capable of informed medical consent to medical treatment. Therefore, it is critical that the DPAHC be signed while mental competency exists. If the principal is not mentally competent when they sign the document, the DPAHC will be invalid.

However, assume that the principal has mental competency and then executes a legally valid DPAHC. Further assume that the principal later becomes mentally incapacitated. Is the DPAHC still valid? Absolutely. The principal's subsequent incapacity does not affect the document's validity. For this reason the document is known as a "Durable" Power of Attorney instead of a regular "Power of Attorney."

The second requirement relates to witnessing. Under a standard printed form DPAHC (for example, the California Medical Association publishes a printed form DPAHC), the document must be either witnessed or notarized. If the document is witnessed, there must be at least two witnesses, both of whom must be 18 years of age or older.

There are persons who cannot be witnesses under any circumstances. One of the witnesses cannot be related to the principal by blood, marriage, adoption, or be a beneficiary in the principal's will. Other persons who cannot be witnesses include the agent, the treating physician, and an employee of a residential care facility for the elderly. If the principal is a patient in a skilled nursing facility the facility's Patient Advocate or Ombudsman must be a witness.

Rather than worry about finding the persons who can legally qualify to be your witnesses, it is usually much easier to have the document signed in the presence of a duly licensed notary public. Most notaries will perform this service for a very modest fee, and there are notaries who will visit hospitals, nursing homes, and even your residence.

The third requirement is that the principal select an agent who is at least 18 years of age. However, certain persons, such as the treating physician, cannot be the agent.

In general, there are few legal restrictions on who the principal can select as his or her agent. However, there are some very important personal considerations. As with the Durable Power of Attorney for Asset Management, the agent that you choose for your DPAHC must be someone that you trust. Your agent will have the responsibility of insuring that your wishes regarding medical treatment will be carried out by your doctor. Conceivably, your agent could have the power to instruct the doctor as to whether you should live or die. For this reason, typically, the agent is a spouse or other close family member.

Moreover, it is a good idea to select an agent the principal considers to be both emotionally strong and sensitive. It may be too emotionally difficult for some loved ones to carry out the principal's wishes—this is especially true when it is requested by the principal to have artificial life support systems withheld or removed. Consequently, it would be a good idea for the principal to discuss these issues with persons close to him or her you in advance of appointing an agent.

If the principal appoints an agent who turns out to be untrustworthy, or incapable of carrying out the principal's wishes, the principal can always revoke the DPAHC as long as he or she is mentally competent. Executing a new legally valid DPAHC automatically revokes the old DPAHC. Also, the principal can revoke the DPAHC by providing written notification to the agent and health care provider that he or she is revoking the DPAHC. Revoking the DPAHC will terminate the agent's authority to act

EDITORIAL:

Why Vote?

By Attorney Antonio Lawson

During one 24 hour period in March, seven people where murdered in the city of Oakland. Five of the victims were murdered execution-style, the bodies of two bond and dumped within blocks of the police station and City Hall.

The tragedies were a source of local news for days, yet the media focused on the violent reputation of Oakland, morbidly fascinated by the record-setting murder rate.

Missing from the various reports was any discussion of the loss suffered by the victims' families and any sense of outrage except for a very few Oakland residents. The plague of drug and gang-related deaths of African-Americans goes on without concern in America.

Tens of thousands march to save the whales, hundreds of thousands march to save an unborn fetus, yet you can't get 100 white suburbanites, or urban dwellers for that matter, to march to save the lives of African-Americans; unless of course the brother in question is on death row. Then the partiicpants are marching for a cause, the baolishment of capital punishment, while none of them really care about the prisoner, let alone the other brother he killed.

The increasingly disheartening conditions faced by African-Americans and lack of national concern heightens the long-standing reality that although Blacks and whites inhabit the same land, we live in two different worlds. Because these worlds are so divergent and the needs of one always secondary, one is caused to wonder why should we, African-Americans, bother to vote?

The question is very legitimate. Neither of the remaining candidates, Clinton or Brown, evokes enthusiasm. I fail to mention George Bush or Pat Bucnanan as any African-American who votes for either Republican candidate needs serious psychiatric care.

The real problem with every candidate year end and year out is that none addresses the growing ills of African-Americans. None has a plan for decreasing the devastation of crack-cocaine or creating rehabilitation centers for those addicted. None has addressed the fact that the number one cause of death among young African-American males is murder at the hands of other young African-American males.

Neother candidate displays knowledge, let alone concern about the fact that the infant mortality rate for African-American babies is as high as that in many undeveloped third world nations. No one is concerned that the unemployed rate for African-Americans is two to three times higher than that of whites. No candidate has offered an education plan designed to bolster the dismal education received by 90 percent, of African-Americans. No one is concerned that the life expectancy of African-Americans has actually gone down.

When it comes to African-Americans, no candidate is concerned at all except to the extent that can get their picture taken with Jesse Jackson and your vote.

National Black Alcoholism Group Plans Resource Directory

The major health problem facing the African American community today is Alcoholism and addiction—and all their related problems. Economic, social and political implications resulting from these problems call for the collective effort of all African Americans. The process "is" recovery for ourselves, our families and our community. And you must do whatever it is you can do to make the process work and grow.

The National Black Alcoholism Council, CA. Chapter is developing a Resource Directory for California with an African American emphasis.

NBAC wants your help to make the Resource Directory the best ever published in our community—one which provides useful information on alcohol and other drug (A.O.D.) services, Data and information about African American cultural services related to health promotion and the recovery process.

Send us information about:
-Low-cost resources in California;
-Alcohol and other drug facilities, services and treatment;
-African American community organizations vital to recovery and health issues;
-Data on media resources related to Alcohol and other Drug services and treatment.
For more information: Telephone: (510) 444-0254 or send mail to NBAC Resource Director, 303 Van Buren Ave., Oakland, CA. 94610 Attn: Max Reed.

on the principal's behalf.

Finally, unless the principal specifies otherwise in the document, the DPAHC will remain in effect indefinitely. However, persons executed a DPAHC prior to January 1, 1992, will only remain valid for a maximum of seven years from the date of execution. Therefore, if you fall into this category, it would be a good idea to execute a new DPAHC if you intend for it to remain in effect for longer than a seven year period.

A DPAHC can be legally executed in California in a very short period of time and with every little expense. If you decide to execute a DPAHC, it is a good idea to consult an attorney knowledgeable in Elder Law to insure that your DPAHC conforms to the requirements of California law.

Two New Parks Dedicated

CREST RANCH PARK

This brand new park will be officially dedicated in a ceremony on May 2 at 10 a.m. Everyone is invited. Festivities will include free kites to the first 50 children.

The master plan for this park was developed with input from neighbors and community groups. The park features a shaded arbor, a children's playground, basketball courts and a large grassy play area.

SOUTH VALLEJO NEIGHBORHOOD PARK

Neighbors are invited to gather at 1:30 p.m. to dedicate this new park.

Neighborhood input played a significant role in the renovation of this park. The playground has been moved closer to the street to increase visibility. At the base of the hill, in an open field, there are volleyball and basketball courts and picnic sites. New landscaping, lighting, pathways and restrooms make this park to be proud of.

Wake-Up Call

the country has led to a country that is — for all practical purposes — fearful of its own people, especialy African-Americans. I can't help but believe that such hysteria, which plays well in suburban areas, including Simi Valley, probably made it easy for the jury to give the police officers in the King case the benefit of the doubt.

A friend recently said the acquittal of the four police officers was the ultimate "wake-up call." Another friend compared our present state with that of South Africa. "The only difference is that we have the right to vote . . . but what good does that do?" she said.

Well, if this was the wake-up call, then I think we should be about the business of taking advantage of any advantage we have. The worst thing we can do is just sit back and wring our hands. We don't have to accept bad behavior in our community — and we don't have to accept it from public servants who are here to serve us. Instead of the acquittals just being yet another slap in the face, let's do something. It's up to all of us.

Letter to the Editor:

Solano County Partnership On Family Violence

Forming a partnership against violence in Solano County is a significant measure in terms of affording public awareness as well as the developing of community involvement beyond what we are presently doing for our families. It is an exciting venture in further investing in human potential as Solano County Economic Opportunity Council, our private, non-profit agency, has been doing for over 25 years now.

Family violence is a multi-leveled problem impacting families, schools, criminal justice systems, mental health and social service agenicies' dynamics. If through partnership we can educate and support our community, we will begin to develop a stronger, positive, creative, supportive learning environment in which our children may grow up in safety to bring forth healthy and happy children of their own exemplifying what they have been able to learn from their parents and community.

Who is in control, and who is out of control? Control issues are at the heart of the matter. The three phases of violence explain the cycle of violence, as noted by psychologist and author, Lenore Walker:

1. The Tension Building Phase: Name calling, shoving, slapping.

2. The Acute Battering Phase: Tension building leading into explosive actions.

3. The Loving Reconciliation Phase: Both parties feel a sense of relief that it's over. The batterer is sorry and says it will never happen again, if she wouldn't make him mad. She begins to feel responsible for the trouble.

It is vital for women to recognize the signs and symptoms of family violence and controlling behaviors in order to absent themselves from potentially dangerous living conditions, not only for themselves, but for their children and relatives. Statistics show that family members and police officers are losing their lives at alarmingly increasing rates nationwide because of domestic disputes.

The following is a composite example of how our Domestic Violence Program addresses such incidents:

Jane finally decided to call our 24 Hour Hot Line after being beaten "for the last time." She can't take it any longer. She has stayed with her husband for five years now. He keeps telling her that it's all her fault. "If you didn't make me mad, I wouldn't hit you. You're a stupid ass." (Who's in control? Who's out of control?)

Jane can't be convinced she should leave. "What will my kids do? I don't want to take them out of school. I don't want to take them away from their friends. What will their friends say? I don't want my friends to know. What will I do for money? I don't know what to do?"

"Yes, he choked me. I was afraid, I think I lost consciousness. He told me he was sorry; he cried. I don't think he will hurt me again. I know he won't hurt the kids. They never hear us½ they are asleep when we argue. Sometime they wake up crying. I don't know what to do. Yes, I'm pregnant. He did kick me."

"He says it's my fault. It probably is. I'm going to counseling, but he won't go. He says it's my problem, not his. He keeps calling me names. Yes, I work, I'm a teacher. I don't want anyone to know."

After talking to staff, Jane decided to come into our program. She was assisted by an advocate, and obtained a restraining order. She is attending Changing Ways for Women counseling in-shelter, and her children are participating in Art Therapy. Jane is looking for work and feeling better about herself. Her husband is in counseling now, but they are not going back together. They are learning about themselves first.

When a husband or boyfriend, any family member or friend is out of control, i.e., name calling, pushing, pulling hair, etc., that constitutes violence. If that same person were to say or do the same things to a stranger at Solano Mall, the victime would call for help — and that person would be arrested. Even more so should family members or friends do likewise by leaving the violent scene and seeking help.

The victim is in control of the outcome by taking action, by accepting the responsibility of "Just saying NO" and following through.

It is the person who is out of control that needs to be directed to counseling in order to learn how to develop safe coping skills and to be able to live a more productive life. These are learned skills vital to everyone's well-being.

It is also the victim's responsibility to get out of that role by following through with counseling as well, so that the pattern of involvement in violent acts will change. The above example is taken from our program's daily crises intervention — each case, although unique to each in-

Mobil Oil CEO To Head NAACP's 1992 Corporate Program

Allen E. Murray, Chairman of the Board, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Mobil Corporation, has been named Chairman of the NAACP's 1992 Corporate Campaign, Dr. Benjamin L. Hooks, the NAACP's Executive Director/CEO has announced.

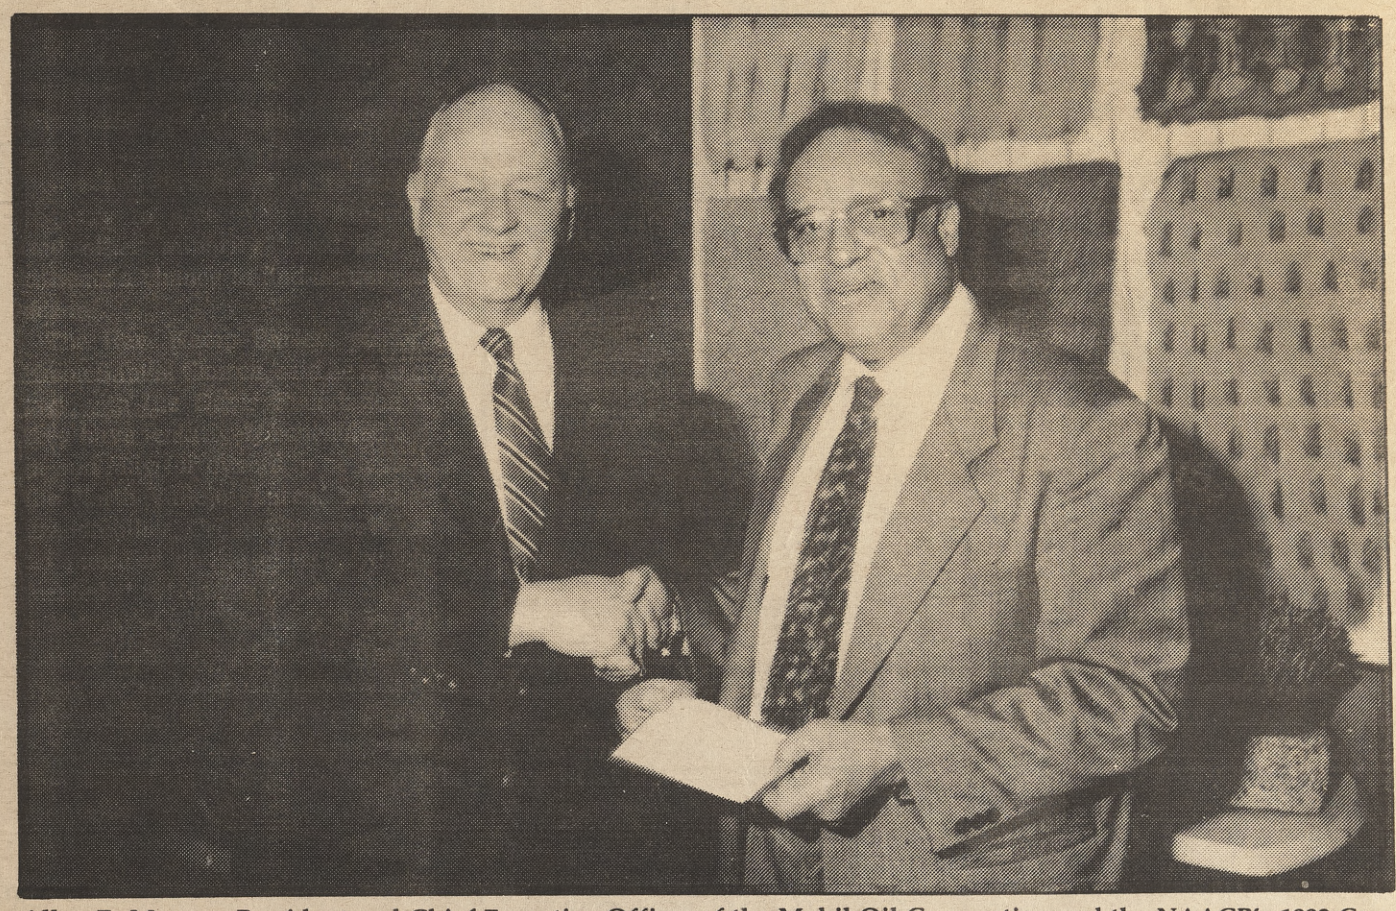

More than 400 of the nation's largest corporations and companies are contributors to the Corporate Campaign. This year's goal is $4 million.

"We are most fortunate to have Mr. Murray as this year's chairman," Dr. Hooks said. "We know of his sincere commitment to equal opportunity and equality. Under his leadership, we are confident of a very positive response from the corporate community," he added.

"It is a great honor for me to have an opportunity to be of service to the oldest and one of the most revered civil rights organizations in the nation, the NAACP," Mr. Muray said. "Its rich tradition of leadership in advancing freedom and equality throughout our society has earned the gratitude and support of all Americans."

Mr. Murray has been with the Mobil Corporation since 1952 when he joined the company as an accountant. From 1956 until 1965, he held various financial and planning positions in the Middle East Department.

In 1967, Mr. Murray was appointed General Manager of the Middle East and Indonesian Affairs Department.

Allen E. Murray, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Mobil Oil Corporation and the NAACP's 1992 Corporate Campaign Chairman, presents a check to the NAACP for $100,000. Accepting is Dr. Benjamin L. Hooks, NAACP Executive Director/CEO.

In 1974, he was elected Corporate Vice President and appointed Executive Vice President of Mobil's Marketing and Refining Division, and in 1983, he was appointed president and Chief Operating Officer of Mobil Oil Corporation.

Mr. Murray is a member of the Business Council, The President's Advisory Committee on Trade Policy and Negotiations and the Business Roundtable.

dividual, has a commonality, a common theme that makes breaking the cycle of violence easier to achieve once that cycle is understood.

Our goal is to meet total family need. We have the help of many in our county which includes many churches who send regular contributions, any individual donors through United Way contributions (United Way is our major funding source), many individuals, Travis AFB, city employees, and others who have been wonderfully supportive and who continue to express their concern and share generously with the women and children who seek a safe haven. Our Solano County community has been in control by saying, "We care. How can we help?"

By developing a county-wide partnership, and by continuing our work to be inclusive with the educational system, police departments, district attorney, attorneys, judges, churches, social service agencies, hospitals, etc., we will ensure a comprehensive community level approach. Together we are and will continue to make a positive difference!

Governor Wilson has expressed concern about family violence, but disdain for welfare mothers. Yet, the welfare department is the first called upon for help after daring to leave an unsafe home and coming into our shelter. We cannot afford to tell women to leave a dangerous home only to become instantly povertized and homeless. Where will women and children go if affordable housing and an adequate income is not possible?

We can again "Just say NO" to budget cuts affecting the women and children we protect, and we can say "YES" to Solano County Community Partnerships against family violence and poverty.

Thank you to each person for the continued support you have shown our program. We appreciate each donation, each hour of time taken, and the talents you continue to give to our women and children. We took Santa and Mrs. Claus at Christmas, and the Easter Bunny on Good Friday to our shelters. The children were thrilled. Thank you so much for our excellent staff and volunteers who make our program possibilities a reality.

Philmore Graham Receives National Award

Philmore Graham, who founded the Omega Boys and Girls Club more than 25 years ago, will journey to Chicago this month where he will be honored for his service to the community.

The 1,000 Points of Light award will be presented at the national conference of the International Grocer's Association. Graham was nominated by Mark Tate, of the Raley's Supermarket in Vallejo.

Graham originally founded the Continentals of Omega Boys Club in November 1966. Six members were part of that first group. Graham, inspired by the cardinal principals of Brotherood, Scholarship, Perserverence and Uplift, made daily contact with the students through tutoring, trips and sports. Back then, the group met in Graham's garage. Meeting were later held in Friendship Baptist Church. Today, the group has its own meeting place at 555 Corcoran in North Vallejo.

Under Graham's guidance, scores of former club members have gone on to achieve academic and professional success.

For more information about the club, call (707) 643-1728.
